his troops will fire on foreign air-planes flying over Chinese territory. The opinion prevails in foreign business circles that the boycott will not have serious economic conse-quences, because China needs foreign goods and Chinese merchants are adent at evading restrictions which adept at evading restrictions which the boycott committees may impose. The general Chinese political outlook remains obscure and confused with secret negotiations between the various war lords accompanying a lull on the fighting fronts. The lat-est reports indicate the so-called model governor of Shansi province, Yen Hsi-shan, still trying to mediate between Chiang Kai-shek and Chang Tso-lin and attempting to form a triple alliance on the basis of ac-ceptance of the Kuomintang political program and anti-Bolshevism, but this alliance is still uncompleted.

SOCIAL WORKERS DEFEND DRY LAW

DES MOINES, Ia. (Special Correspondence)-Social workers assembled here recently for the National Conference of Social Work, voted nearly nine to one in favor of prohibition in an official ballot taken by the Des Moines Register among 442 men and women who are actively engaged in this work in the United States.

The poll showed that 338 workers believe drinking has been reduced under prohibition, while only 43 declared it has increased. These declared it has increased. These representatives from every state in the Union, said drinking has been reduced 69 per cent since the adventof prohibition.

That prohibition has had a beneficial effect on the Nation was up-held by 389 workers, and denied by only 42. Only 21 workers favored repeal of the Bighteenth Amend-ment, while 355 were against re-peal. It was stated by 294 workers that stricter enforcement was need that stricter enforcement was nec-essary with 58 denying this. In answer to the question relative to higher alcoholic content in liquors, 334 opposed increasing the percentage and 32 favored the change. Although the conference has al-ways made it a point never to take an official stand on any issue, delegates unofficially indicated through the above ballot, that so far as they are concerned, prohibition is here to stay. "One must recognize that the so-cial workers of America are pecu-liarly well qualified to give practical judgment in the advantages or disadvantages involved in prohibition," Ralph Reed, director of the Des Moines Public Welfare Community

FOR SUPERHIGHWAY

Robert Kingery, executive secretary of the Chicago Regional Plan-ning Association, viewed the project with increased confidence, he said, following the action of the Board. The project calls for the ultimate construction of four 40-foot arteries two running each way, so that con-gestion of through traffic in Chicago would be reduced and interstate movements of vehicles expedited.

CHICAGO SCHOOL POLICY STUDIED BY CIVIC GROUP

Citizens' Public Education Commission Would Build Up, Not Tear Down

Special from Monitor Bureau CHICAGO, June 10-Although Chicago Soard of Education policies are radically affected by the recent change in political administration, the newly formed Citizen's Public ucation Commission is not plunging hastily into any controversy, Joseph K. Brittain, president, made plain in an interview.

"We have instructed our committees to get facts as to the efficiency of the schools," said Mr. Brittain, "This being a movement that will have to do with the schools for a great many years, we are not going into personal controversies. Our aim is not to tear down but to build man."

He said that the larger corporations have burt the smaller manufacturers by their direct selling methods, which wipe out the middle-man upon whom the smaller manufacturers must rely for distribution of their products, and the smaller manufacturers must band together

Since the commission was formed Since the commission was formed by representatives of leading Chicago civic clubs about six weeks ago, its president has been giving his time to forming a solid organization, on which he hopes will be truly representative citizens and capable of functioning for the benefit of the school children. Dr. Louis L. Mann, rabbi and lecturer at the University of Chicago, has been University of Chicago, has been led to head the educational committee. Experienced architects, en-gingers and contractors are being chosen for the committee on build-

"We are getting fine men to take an earnest interest in the work," Mr. Britain said. "The executive secretary has not yet been engaged, but the commission expects to get a man who is an educator with business shifty."

When the organization is complete e commission will seek to deal discily with the school board upon uestions in which citizens are interquestions in which citizens are inter-ested. It intends to investigate first, then recommend on the basis of facts it has found. Publicity methods are not favored by Mr. Brittain. "We do not want to try our case in the press," he said.

The commission is winning the kind of support it desires, the presi-dent declared. Although no campaign-for funds has been launched, one citizen subscribed $1000 to show his

He said that the larger corporamanufacturers must band together to co-operate in their manufacturing and distributing problems.

Mr. Anderson said that it is not the desire of the majority of the manufacturers or people to see the Government step in and control industry. Self regulation of business, he stated, is the best protection against government control and de-against government control and de-clared that the hope for the future is rational conservation.

Benjamin Loring Young, former Speaker of the House of Representa-tives, said that the representation of the Associated Industries is taken seriously by the members of the General Court because the organization did not represent a minority and has no selfish interests to serve, but is working for the best interests of its 1600 members representing all branches of industry and they be-Heve what is best for all industry in the state is best for all the people.

The history of the teaching of the fine arts at Harvard is not old. It belongs, indeed, to the present generation and to the one which immediately preceded it. Professor Norton himself occupied the chair of the history of art from 1875 until 1898 when he retired. In 1895, within the last three years of his tenure of office, what is now known as the old Fogg Art Museum Building was erected. At that time art in American universities was regarded by the

With the building of the old Fogg. however, the gift of Mrs. William Hayes Fogg of New York as a memorial to her husband, another of President Eliot's theories was put suddenly into actual practice: a theory that the student of fine arts should have at his disposal examples of the particular art which he studying. E. W. Forbes Made Director "In 1909, Edward W. Forbes '95, was made director of the museum. The year 1912 saw the remodeling of the lower floor and the gallery to increase exhibition space and to provide better lighting. Prof. Paul J. Sachs, now associate professor of the next president of the university, fine arts and associate director of the museum, acceded to the latter formal reception to the members of office in 1915. Since then the museum and the division of which it is the center have steadily grown. On a fixed income for the purchase of the works of art which has never extion the baccalaureate services will ceeded $3000 a year, the museum has acquired, in addition to loans from private sources, collections the value of which is estimated at most value of which is estimated at more than $3,000,000. In 1924, $2,000,000 were raised to build a new museum and to provide for it an endowment of $1,000,000, and the division of fine arts began a new and heroic era. "The new Fogg is situated on the southeast corner of Quincy Street and Broadway, where it covers the ground formerly occupied by the old Batchelder home, the residence of Prof. B. S. Hurlbut, and by the house in which Professor Agassiz lived.

CHICAGO, June 19—Differences as to dates were adjusted and standards for medley relay races were adopted here yesterday when representatives of 10 relay carnivals organized the American Relay Association, O. M. Solem of Drake University, representing the Drake Relays, was elected president of the new group.

As a result of the gathering Ohio State University agreed to advance the date of its carnival to the first Saturday in May, thus avoiding conflict with the games held by University of Kansas. This move, it is believed, will enhance the importance of the Buckeye event, bringing it around a week after the Drake and Penn relays.

Standard medley relays to prevall at all these meets are the sprint, consisting of a rum of 440-yards, two of 220-yards and one of 880-yards; and the distance, made up of a 440- an 880, a three-quarter mile, and a one melle run.

Relays represented besides Drake, Ohio State and Kansas were the Dakota, Georgia Tech, Illinois, Rice Institute, University of Texas, University of Washington and Marquette University.

Mrs. R. H. Barlow of the Merion Cricket Club was winning from Miss Harriet Ellison, Brae Burn Country Club, 3 and 1. This made the score 5 to 4 in favor of Philadelphia.

Who Attributes Low Standing to Hitting Slump

Having three of the four leading batters of the league in 1926 as well as the individual leaders of 1925 and 1926 in its lineup, has apparently meant little to the struggling Detroit Tigers, for as Manager George J. Morriarty said yeaterday, the low standing of the club can be traced directly to lack of good hitting Although the club has failed to be classed as a strong pennant contender during the past few years, mainly because of the lack of pitching effectiveness, Manager Moriarty states that his pitching has been much better than fans in general believe.

"I cannot attribute our present low standing to poor pitching when-Holloway, Stoner, Whitehill and Collins have turned in some fine performances. And some of our new pitchers, Carroll for instance, have displayed good form, it won't be long before and whitehill and colling and attribute our present low standing to poor pitching when-Holloway, Stoner, Whitehill and Collins have turned in some fine performances. And some of our new pitchers, Carroll for instance, have displayed good form, "the manager said." The hitting is getting better all the time and although some of the heavier hitting is getting better all the time and although some of the heavier hitting stars have not reached their regular form, it won't be long before the whole club is showing its strength at bat."

Harry H. Heilmann, Robert R. Fothergill and Henry E. Manush, outfield trio, were the three Detroit representatives among the leading four last year. Heilmann won batting honors in 1925 and Manush in 1926. Heilmann is far from his regular hitting form while Manush is in a slump also. Fothergill is at present showing marked signs of his hitting prowess. It is certain, however, that whatever slump the club may be in so far as hitting is concerned, it is only temporary. Morlarty Likes Warner

Morlarty Likes Warner

Manager Morlarty speaks highly of his third baseman, J. H. Warner, who although playing in 95 games in 1926, is still compartively new to the majors and is really proving himself this season. Warner is not a heavy hitter but has shown ability as a timely and consistent batter. His batting has fallen off somewhat lately but it is only a part of the general slump.

The only new pitchers that the manager speaks about with any great favor are Owen H. Carroll, former Holy Cross star, last year with Toronto where he had a fine season, and Donald Hankins, who has pitched several fine games in relief roles. Carrol was first offered a professional contract by Daniel P. Howley, present St. Louis American's manager, while Carroll was playing for the Newark High School.

Three other newcomers who are still showing well enough to keep their places on the reserved litts are Mervyn J. Shea, catcher, who played behind the bat for Sacramento for four years, George S. Smith, another pitcher from Toronto, and Bernard W. Deviveiros, a shortstop from Beaumont wrere he played a leading nart in setting up a new minor league fecord for doubleplays.

Handicapped by Absences

Handlcapped by Absences "We have been handicapped a great deal by having players out of the lineup," the manager continued. "Blue was forced to take a rest for a period, Gibson and Dauss have been missed in the box and McManus was forced to our outlook."

GENEVA CALLS MOST TARIFFS MUCH TOO HIGH

Conference Styles Freedom Trade a Primary Condition of World Prosperity

GENEVA (Special Correspond-fice)—Rarely had there been such spate of talk as occurred during a spate of talk as occurred during the May meeting of the International Economic Conference—talk about tariffs and trade barriers, promititions and discriminations, trusts and cartels, rationalisation and mass production, and a hundred and one other topics connected with industry and commerce. It would have been astonishing if nothing had come out of all the talk. Such a forrent was bound to sweep away some ancient prejudices, and to reyeal new currents of ideas. General agreement could hardly be looked for, but certain definite lines of thought have emerged.

And the first and most remarkable of these is the discovery of the con-of these is the discovery of the con-ference that "tariffs as a whole, especially tariffs imposed since the war, tend to be too high, too unequal and too unstable." "The conference is convinced that a return to the effective liberty of international trading is one of the primary conditions of world prosperity."

So runs the striking phrase in conclusions of the committee merce, which after condemn-"deplorable results" of import and export prohibitions, arbi-trary practices and disguised dis-criminations, declared that "it is important for the recovery and future development of world trade that governments should forthwith spandon an economic policy which is injurious to the interest both of their own and other nations."

Chief Trade Barriers

Chief Trade Barriers
This line of reasoning was applied to customs tariffs, with the result that the conference was finally persueded to declare that "tariffs, which had grown higher since the war, were at present one of the chief barriers to trade," and that "their harmful effect had been increased through their constant changes, which interfered with the placing of long contracts." The necessity for atability and the desirability of most favored nation treatment between favored nation treatment between all nations, was the favorite topic of the Americans in the debate on for the rest, they did not consider it their business to advise Europe as to the precise level of its customs duties, but strongly supported the arguments against discriminations in tariffs. Nor did the Americans hesitate to accept the general conclusions of the conference, which declared that "the time find come declared that the time rad come to pit an end to the increase in tariffs and to move in the opposite direction, and that the nations should take steps forthwith to remove or diminish these tariff bar-riers that gravely hamper trade, by entering into commercial treaties for that purpose."

Unanimous Agreement It was also unanimously agreed that high tariffs should not be established for bargaining purposes, and that the economic organization of the League of Nations should act as a clearing house for a continuous discussion of the possibility of further action for reducing excessive tariffs. Moreover, internal taxes of a discriminatory character on imported goods were condemned, as well as export taxes on raw material well as export taxes on raw material.

Wholesale prices are falling steadily. At the end of February they were 15 per cent lower than in August, 1926, but retail prices still lag behind. But Europe is also handicapped, as the report of the conference says, by problems of an international character. And in this connection the conference, although the war debts formed no part of its agenda, referred to their injurious effect on industry awing to the load of taxation which they necessitated. The effort for restore Europe's economic position, therefore, called for the rationalization of industry and coordination between the economic efforts of various, countries. The dream of a united Europe (in the economic sense) was regarded as impracticable, but the debates in the committee on Industry brought out the fact that much might be done by better organization of industry.

America's Presperity
In these discussions Henry M.
Robinson and Norman Davis played a prominent part, for all the experts were anxious to know the secret of America's presperity. Standardization, simplification of process, mass production, and the increased consuming power which would be derived from the cheapening of goods and the payment of higher wages—all these topics were discussed and re-discussed, until certain clear and definite ideas emerged as to what could be done.

There was doubt as to whether to the ancient traditions of individ-nalism, could successfully adop-methods which had been applied to a great continent freed from all such obstructions. But the general effect of the debate was to brace the Euroof the debate was to brace the European industrialists, who listened, to the thought of renewed effort for greater efficiency, and for this purpose the idea of international industrial agreements made an attractive appeal to the conference. But in this matter the workers' and consumers' representatives struck a warning note, which was echoed by the American delegation, who know something can delegation, who know something of the danger of uncontrolled trusts.

Higher Wages First Not unreasonably, the workers desired to see the higher wages first before they committed themselves to the theoretical benefits of rationalization and international cartels. B common agreement, words were in-serted in the final resolutions, which required that their legitimate interrequired that their legitimate interests especially in the displacement of labor, which often follows improved methods of mechanism and business, should be considered. But although the Americans accepted the report as a whole, they refrained from voting for the special resolution approving of trusts.

Finally a-word must be said about the attitude of the Russians. They came to Geneva full of fears and suspicions, but in spite of their sly digs nicions, but in spite of their sly dies at the capitalist system, they left feeling that after all it was better feeling that after all it was better to hold out the olive branch, and that the naughty capitalists were not so very different from themselves. They were comically eager to get an admission that they were the co-equals of the rest. The word "co-existence," like the blessed word "Mesopotamia," seemed to have an overwhelming significance in the eyes of Ossinski, Sokolnikoff, Khinchouk and Varga.

The capital sum now available for this purpose is £40,000. The interest on this sum is to purchase pictures. Aberdeen can thus spend £2000 annually upon this purpose free of any burden upon its general community, which, however, taxes itself voluntarily to the extent of £2500 each year to pay for the administraeach year to pay for the administra-tive expenses of the gallery. But the Soylet delegates were dis appointed that they could not persuade everyone that their country was a perfect Eldorado, to which the industrialist had only to take his money bags to make a fortune. They were so eager, however, to let it be supposed that they were doing busi-ness in Geneva, especially with the Americans, that the United States delegation had to issue a denial of these rumors. After emphasizing the fact that monetary rehabilitation will serve the best interests of sound business, tha Minister pointed out the need for reducing production costs, suggesting that this could be achieved by improving industrial technique and rationalising industries rather than by reducing wages. It is indeed in the interest of industry to raise progressively the standard of living of the working classes, as by this means the consuming capacity of the home market fa raised. He pointed as welf to the need of fully utilizing all raw materials, giving the preference, where possible, to those produced at home; to perfecting technical organisation, to encouraging scientific research and to alming at quality rather than at mass production. This last point is one to which the Government attaches great importance, and the facilities it is providing for vocational and professional training will assist in this direction. and professional training will assist

Formation of Cartels The Minister alluded to the tend-ency of forming international cartels, advantageous participation in which could only be secured by a high potential output, which in its turn demands industrial concentration. Speaking of tariff protection, he reminded the House that while it may be essential for certain indus-tries, high protective duties are the enemies of progress, for they encour enemies of progress, for they encourage indifference to the improvement of manufacturing methods with a view to raising the quality and reducing the cost of production. The House expressed its approval of these policies and of the words in which the Minister urged the need of speeding up industrial amortizations and limiting dividends and all other distribution of profits.

The one looks about among the women whom one knows, one will discover that there are two kinds of housekeepers. One of these regards her work much as her husband does his business. She has her household magazines that she eagerly scans each month for suggestions as to how she may accomplish her work more quickly and easily, experiments with the ideas and modifies them until they are of the greatest possible help to her. The other kind is so busy doing things as her mother used to do before anybody thought of making a woman's work lighter, that she never has time to read.

scrubbed occasionally. Turn the breeze from the electric fan over the wet surfaces so they will dry before being so "tracked up" that they hardly show they have been scrubbed at all. Incidentally, the worker should turn the breeze on herself while she is scrubbing, for it brings refreshment. Less Ironing

The ironing in most households may be cut down quite a little in hot weather, even though in summer more light dresses are worn, more household linens are used and, gen-erally, more entertaining is done. Paper luncheon sets help to give a dainty effect to the summer table.

Side curtains with a valance of some pretty material may be washed and ironed in only about a quarter of the time required for laundering net curtains that must be dried on stretchers. Even stout crepe-paper may be used for window draperies. Turkish towels can be folded at the line and put away immediately, but towels of linen and huckaback eat up hours of time over the ironing board. Crepe dresses with bloomers to match are charming and cool for little girls and require only washing and a good shake at the line to make them look nice. Little boys revel in neat coveralls that require half the for ironing that fancy wash

Tennis is the most active of games. It requires an unusual degree of concentration as well as freedom of body movement. Distractions such as undergarment discomfort, for example, are responsible for many returns into the net or outside the court.

Kickernicks, being essentially undergarments of comfort and freedom of movement, are popular with the tennis enthusiast. The patented construction of Kickernicks makes them undergarments so unobtrusive that they may be forgotten in use.

I heard, in Iowa, an unusual talk given by Miss Irma René Koen, who given by Miss Irma René Koen, who is often designated as America's leading woman artist. The readers of the Monitor are familiar with some of Miss Koen's writings which appear occasionally on the art page. She spoke at the state convention of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs on "Fashions in Art." This was not a fashion talk in the usually accepted meaning of the phrase, but a charming interpretation of the art of today and a remarkably clear and interesting explanation of how different contemporary artists are expressing themselves. In imagination Mias Koen picked for us a bunch of zinnias from the garden and then in word pictures arranged them and put them onto canvas in the various areas which the different artists of

It was the easiest thing in the world to visualize these flowers and the lovely picture, which the artists would make of them, and when Miss Koen had finished we had a gallery of beautiful paintings in our thought so deftly and vividly painted that they will never be forgotten but may be brought to our sight at any time. Miss Koen closed her picture-taik by bringing to us the everlasting truth that one must have a spiritual feeling and sense of the beautiful before one will be able to give it to others. I do not know that Miss Koen is available to clubs; her home is in Rock Island, Ill., sear Davenport, Ia. Preparing Fruit

By this new method, the fruit is prepared in the usual way: wash it, cut out unedible parts, remove the skin if desired, cut it into bits, or for, and cook until the fruit is ten-der. Strain, and the juice is ready for use, if a clear jelly is wanted. In measuring the cooked fruit for jam with jelly between the small pieces, press it down into the cup so the juice fills all the spaces between. If a solid jam is desired, drain off the juice and fill the cup with the fruit

In the directions given by authorities in the art of cooking nowadays, standard measuring cups holding ½ of a pint are used. These are of glass or aluminum and are plainly glass or aluminum and are plainly berry, loganberry or blackberry jelly marked on the sides for quarters and marked on the sides for quarters and thirds of cupfuls. The Place of American History in British Schools as well, an increase in the amount of attention given the subject in the general schools, in particular those of London, and in several of the re important public schools. A beginning has been made in an inde-pendent study of the subject in at least two of the great universities.

All of this has not been unrelated to the natural growth of interest manifested in the closing years of the Great War, but a considerable por-tion of interest bids fair to retain a permanent place in the British thought. It may even have a possi-

Attention has thus been directed to the amount of space given to American events in history as hitherto presented in British schools and in particular to the character of that presentation. Has it been "woefully inadequate"; has "shockingly unfair"? It is to give adequate answer to each of these questions.

Little for 100 Years American history, as such, has not been presented. Nor was it to be expected that it would be. But American events and contacts with America appear occasionally in texts given over to English, British, European or world history. Thus the events in America of the period 1763-83, termed frequently "Disrup-tion of Empire," but which we know as the American Revolution, are given large place in all texts. After that American material is meager. Even the more extended texts give slight attention to the War of 1812 except as part of the struggle with Napoleon. After 1815 and until the outbreak of the Great War in 1914 the normal text has only an occasional sentence for the United States. Apparently that 100 years witnessed little in America of great importance to students of British

So accustomed are Americans to the thought that Great Britain has always played an important rôle in American history that they find such detachment somewhat baffling. They are told that the student of British history must know in considerable detail of the development of France; must know French and Spanish story, as he need not know American history, because Great Britain been part of the European world. Americans viewing the adventure of Columbus as an event of primary importance may remark that since that event the nations of western Europe have been a part of the American world. But upon the thought brought up in the traditions of European history the im-

But in judging the motive force in British teaching it is proper to consider the treatment of the "American Revolution" in texts given over to British history which have been in use prior to the present increase of interest in American history. Has it been as distorted as national his-tory has been known to be; has it been as partisan as one might expect of a people who suffered the "loss of colonies," due, as the rulers of that particular period asserted, to the work of "irresponsible agitators" and "wretched traitors"?

The answer must be in the negative. In a book for beginners, we are told that "England was a country divided against herself," and referenced. divided against herself," and reference is made to the work of "the great American patriot, Washington." Shaping One's Course

Written for The Christian Science Monitor

HERE is probably no more apt thought of all that embarrasses illustration of the pursuit of perplexes, and annoys. When Jesus was a guest in their plains in "Science and Health home, Mary sat at his feet learning Key to the Scriptures" (p. 545), the wonderful truths which fell where she says: "The condemnation from his lips and drinking in the revealings of a new and more spiritual sense of life. The narrative reads that Martha came to Jesus and asked him to bid Mary that she come and help her to serve; whereupon Jesus replied, "Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." Thus he approved the attitude of her who shaped her course according to modes of thinking above the mortal.

We need not gather from this simple incident of home life that Jesus rebuked Martha for serving or for attending to necessary household tasks. Rather did he point out to her the importance of placing the pursuit of spiritual things first. In fact, he showed the need of shaning one's course Spiritward, rather than earthward. The Master knew the need of daily toil; for as a carpenter had he not toiled side by side with Joseph? He knew, moreover, the necessity of a changed basis of thought in regard to living and working. He knew the importance of a fuller recognition that being is spiritual and sustained by spiritual truth: knew that all right human activity is but the expression of God's law of action, and that such activity will be harmonious and proluctive exactly in the degree that governs thought.

Without doubt, much of the petty worry which are sometimes met with n homes, or among kindred, arises because one or all of the members of the household are cumbered with too much serving, and regard the serving as material rather than as a right mental activity, which divine Mind should control, regulate, and bless. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," was the rule of Paul, who glorified labor. Accordmakes a bed, the carpenter who helps to build a house, or the farmer who sows his field, if faithful in the performance of the many trivial details which enter into these activities, may glorify God,-mani-WAAR3CHIJNLIJK bestaat er het ook in mindere mate dan de in the serving. of mortals to till the ground means this .- that mortals should so improve material belief by thought tending spiritually upward as to destroy materiality. Man, created by God, was given dominion over the whole earth."

"Thought tending spiritually upward"! Here, then, is the rule, the process, chosen by Mary and commended by Jesus. And it is the solution of the problem of irksome toil, Seeking the spiritual status of man, finding sonship with God, working with the Father and laboring in His service glorifies toil, quickens endeavor, and governs all the minuties of human affairs. It may be that humbler kind is not to be avoided. even though such a one may be one's dominion over the temptation to be cumbered in the serving is the speediest step out of that into something better. Through daily recognition of God's ability to supply the needed patience, grace, and strength required to "carry on," one will gain increasing assurance of the infinitude of good, as well as of the nearness of divine Love, that sweetens each daily task.

Probably no more discomforting and disquieting arguments come to divine law, and not human will, one than that he is not in his right place, that he is doing work beneath him, or that he should be making faultfinding, irritability, and nagging greater advancement toward a higher goal. The best silencer of this talking serpent is a greater measure of gratitude for the privilege of serving right where we are, more joy in the daily tasks, greater patience in trials, making each victory over self a step heavenward.

In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 166) Mrs. Eddy speaks of the ability of spiritual law to ennoble human effort, thus: "Like the leaven that a ing to this rule the housewife who certain woman hid in three measures of meal, the Science of God and the spiritual idea, named in this century Christian Science, is leavening the lump of human thought, and all materialism disappear." And she adds: "This spiritual idea, or Christ, entered into the minutie of the life of the personal Jesus. It made him an honest man, a good it could make him the glorified."

SIX R. F. STAGES FEATURED IN NEW RECEIVER

Like most interested radio enthusiasts who have been receiving radio-cast signals since the time that KDKA, WGY and KYW were the KDKA, WGY and KYW were the only stations on the air, I will venture to say that sets without number have been tried, proved and discarded, always for something better. Living in Chicago, the worst city in the world for radio reception, because of its density of radiocast stations, always having a desire to have a set that was just a little to have a set that was just a little better than the other fellow's has nade set building to me more of a

Most of the sets that have been put together have each in their turn been just a little better than the one that preceded it. And, in this list is included the entire category of radio receivers from the simple crystal set to a big 13-tube super heterodyne. The last and probably the best of the receivers that I have tried is the nine-tube straight radiofrequency job built so that it is as easy to tune as the average super and much easier than the ordinary three-dial radio-frequency or neu adjoining studio is finished and that this studio is on the air. The announcer throws a switch and speaks into his microphone to the assembled listeners of the network stations. He remarks that WEAF and associated stations of the National Broadcasting Company's Red Network are about to radiocast a feature from New York.

In the studio of every network station with WEAF, an announcer, headshones on ear, is listening to headphones on ears, is listening to the words from New York. The an-nouncer at 195 Broadway completes his introduction and throws another switch, releasing the out-of-town stations, and without perceptible pause, the various announcers in dif-ferent parts of the country speak into their own microphones, stating their own call letters.

Fifteen seconds later, the WEAF announcer has finished his local announcement. He throws his switch again, once more linking up the network. If the out-of-town announcers have not finished their remarks, their words are lost. Time is the all-important element, and chain radiocasting must go forward on schedule.

The announcer at New York opens the program, introducing the per-formers and stating the first num-ber to be heard. He throws another switch, cutting out his microphone and throwing in the studio micro and throwing in the studio microphones. The program is on the air. It is being heard by WEAF's listeners and in addition, special circuits are carrying it to the transmitters of other stations of the National Broadcasting Company's Red Network which are radiocasting it simultaneously to their audiences.

Every 15 minutes during the of the program, the same routine as that which general routine as that which opened the program allows each of the out-of-town announcers to state the call letters of his station to his listeners, while the WEAF announcer is giving his particular audience similar information.

Between selections, the announcer WEAF's studio talks to the comin walk's studied that to the com-bined audience of the network. The program has been carefully timed in rehearsal so that it will exactly fill the time allotted to it. No time is allowed for applause or for other interruptions by the audience, and no encores are allowed. Moreover, the last five minutes of the program are planned to allow considerable flexibility. Seconds of delay may pile up during the course of an hour. so that their sum will amount to minutes, and a minute's leeway in a network radiocasting schedule is serious matter.

is being "set up" for the program feature which is to follow, and perfeature which is to follow, and perhaps a dress rehearsal of still a third program is going on in another studio. Program features must march before the microphone kept waiting, and the announcer who is handling the feature on the air must make sure that his program finishes on the dot.

As the end of his period approaches, he watches the typewritten detailed program closely. He consults his watch every few seconds to determine the best manner of finishing on time. If the prorigidly observed and every detail of of finishing on time. If the encore number will serve to fill out the allotted period. Such encore selections are always rehearsed, but they are seldom needed.

When a program falls to run exactly on schedule, it is usually slow rather than fast. But this is easily overcome. The announcer informs the conductor of the period of the combined audience of the network stations of the completion of the program. "Please stand by." he finishes, and another switch is thrown In the adjoining studio, a ligh flashes on the box panel. The new announcer opens his microphone and greets a new audience. Another network radiocast feature has passed

MAINE STATUTES REVISION TO BEGIN

Gov. Brewster Expected to Appoint Commissioner Soon

AUGUSTA, Me., June 10 (Special) It is expected that Governor Brewster will within the present month appoint a commissioner to with a resolve passed by the last for the purpose.

The resolve directs that the semmissioner shall complete the re-vision and have 500 copies of the revision printed on or before the opening of the next regular session of the legislature.

The last revision was made in 1916, the commissioner being the now Active Retired Justice John A. Morrill of Auburn. The new re-vision, according to the language of the resolve, will preserve the gen-eral order and phraseology of Justice Morrill's work so far as possible. Lawyers in the departments at the State House are agreed that the task will be a long one and they estimate that it will require nearly all of the two years before the next legislative session to complete it. A force of clerks and typists will be required to do the routine work, and probably a corps of lawyers will be needed to aid the commissioner.

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR AIR SURVEY

Maps Made From Above Called More Accurate, With Very Great Saving of Time

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON-The future of air surveying looks very promising and there is a big future for it, according to Maj. H. Hemming, who lectured recently on this subject before the Institution of Aeronautical Engineers. Air surveying, he said, is today selfsupporting and has achieved this position without the aid of a subsidy. Its greatest claim to rank as a commercial service is that in most of the unmapped parts of the globe, air mapping can be undertaken by air survey companies far more quickly survey companies far more quickly and more cheaply than it can be carried out by the ground method.

Even in Britain, which has as fine a survey organization as any in the world, contracts are being regularly undertaken with satisfactory results. A survey recently carried out for the borough surveyor of Donoaster gained a report stating that "the accuracy of the resulting plan is nearly as great as could be obtained by a chain survey, and much greater than could have been got by plane tabling. There was also a great saving of time and expense."

saving of time and expense."
An extract from a Burma Forest
Bulletin, dealing with the Irrawaddy air survey, stated that the cost had worked out at 293 rupees per square mile, as against a probable 500 rupees for a ground survey which would have given no indication of the types of forest growth. The actual survey was completed in five months and the whole work from start to and the whole work from start to finish of the maps took about a year as against a probable 3 to 4 years. The accuracy was far in excess of anything that could have been ob-tained by ground survey, except at greatly increased cost. The areas and distribution of the different types of forests were obtained with no in-crease of cost, but with an accuracy that it would have taken years and a considerable expenditure to have a considerable expenditure to have equaled.

Major Hemming gave some idea of the amount of work necessary in planning the survey which is now being carried out in Rhodesia for the Rhodesian Congo Border Concesthe Rhodesian Congo Border Concessions Company. A main aerodrome with hangar and workshop had to be built and 39 emergency landing grounds had been planned but might prove unnecessary.

The great need for air survey at present, said Major Hemming, was an instrument which would enable the surveyor to insure that the optical axis of his camera was truly vertical, and there was hope that such an instrument would soon be available.

HAWAII NUT GROWERS TURN TO NEW PRODUCT

HILO, Hawaii (Special Correspondence)—Production of Macadamia nuts, the meat of which closely resembles that of almonds, will soon be an important industry in the Kona district of Hawaii. A tract of land of 100 acres, planted a few years ago, will come into bearing in a short time, and so successful have been the first crops on small plots that large areas are to be put into this product, it has been announced by nut growers.

Macadamia trees were first planted in Hawaii 40 years ago by Dr. David Starr Jordan, who was then on a visit here. These trees are still bearing, and the nuts are regarded as great delicacles. They are eaten roasted, like almonds, or raw, and are delicious. Approximately 60 trees can be planted to the acre, and they start bearing fruit in three years. From 60 to 100 hags of nuts are produced on each acre. At present the high price of 20 cents a pound is paid growers. The nuts drop to the ground when ripe. It is necessary to dry them before shipping.

Take a Ty Trip in June

June is a glorious month in which to leave the city for a week-end trip or for a longer holiday. Before the vacation rush, you can have a comfortable respite, unhurried and unhampered by throngs of pleasure seekers.

Just think of playing golf on links where you may take your own time, of playing tennis without having to wait your turn. Think of traveling on steamers and trains that are not crammed with people. Moreover, during June, rates of summer hotels are usually lower than in July or August.

You can plan your trips and tours from the hotel, resort, and travel advertisements in The Christian Science Monitor. They give information regarding places of interest all over the world.

When answering advertisements please mention the Monitor.

President of Congregationalist Assembly Calls Press Deterrent to Crime

Special from Monitor Bureau Epecial from Monitor Bureau
LONDON—"The church as a whole remains an influence as great in the life of the Nation as at any previous period in our history," declared J. O.
Meggitt in the course of his presidential address at the recent assembly of the Congregational Union of England and Wales here.

"The sense of right and wrong,"
Mr. Meggitt went on, "is more acute today than in any former period.

The child has never had such a place in our midst. Woman has never been so honored. Man has never striven so nobly or successfully to help his fellow man. Never was there so much love in the world as there so much love in the world as the solution in the world as the world today. Even our strikes and lock-outs are conducted in a more huouts are conducted in a more humane manner.

"For much of this we are indebted to the press. The fierce light and influence of the press is a deterrent to evil doers. We know that certain sections of the press pander to low instincts and are always on the lookout for what is called sensational copy, but to the press as a whole we are deeply indebted for much of the improvement in the conditions that exist today."

copy, but to the press as a whole we are deeply indebted for much of the improvement in the conditions that exist today."

Mr. Meggitt went on to discuss the other side of the picture. He referred also to labor unrest, in which however, he sees "healthy signs and evidence that the Nation is setting setting." He spoke hopefully of the part which the Congregational Church has taken in the sustained effort for good. It stands, he said, "for liberty of thought, of worship and of speech."

NO FRIEND OF JAZZ

BRISBANE, Queensl. (Special Correspondence)—Disparaging remarks were made on jazz music by W. Lennon, Lieutenant-Governor of Queensland, in the course of a recent address at the annual dinner of St. David's Society. "Without the Elstedfod, our splendid-musical associations, and our church choirs," declared Mr. Lennon, "we would be in danger of becoming decadent so far as music is concerned. Jazz music has nothing elevating about it. Only the noblest music will save us from artistic inantition."

TONE OF STOCK MARKET AGAIN IS UNSETTLED

Selling Pressure Against Specialties - Merger Rails Bought

NEW YORK, June 10 (P)—Stock rices moved within rather narrow and regular limits at the opening of today's market.

International Combustion sold down a point, and fractional recessions in International Nickel, American Smelting and Famous Players were offsetby small opening gains in General Motors, Reading, Montgomery Ward and Nickel Plate common.
Selling, pressure was more pro-

Selling pressure was more pro-nounced in some of the recently strong specialties, particularly Com-mercial Solvents B, which quickly roke 12 points. Baltimore & Ohio sold down nearly Baltimore & Ohio sold down nearly 3 points on the announcement of new stock financing. Despite the excitement caused yesterday by the report that the new York Federal Reserve Bank would issue "an important statement" after the close of the market, which later proved unfounded, retention of the 4 per cent rediscount rate was generally expected in banking circles.

rate was generally expected in Sausing circles.
Good buying again developed in a number of the so-called "merger rails," the early demand centering largely in such issues as Nickel Plate, Lehigh Valley, Lackawanna, Reading and Western Maryland common and second preferred, all of which advanced 1 to nearly 3 points before the end of the first hour.

Pail Issues Deeline

Rail Issues Decline

General Motors touched another new high record, but the other motors were slow to follow. Renewal of sell-ing pressure against the U. S. Rubber sent both the common and first preferred to new low levels. American Linseed and Park & Tilford reached Linseed and Park & Tilford reached new high ground.

Foreign exchanges opened steady with demand sterling quoted around $4.85%, and French francs around $91½ cents.

The poor reception to the Baltimore & Ohio financing caused selling of other rallyoads in which it is believed additional stock issules are contem-plated, New York Central losing 2 points.

Joints. Similar losses of as much or more were made by a number of other high-grade shares, including Chesapeake & Ohio and American Smelting. Commercial Solvents B dropped 20 points to 340. South Porto Rico Sugar (old) fell 714. Mack Trucks and Hudson Motors

Mack Trucks and Hudson Motors were leading a brisk rally at midday. The renewal rate for call loans which carry over until Tuesday on account of the stock-exchange holiday on Monday was continued at 4%, the recent

Bond Prices Lower

Bond prices drifted generally lower today, partly in reflection of the con-tinued flow of new offerings which furnishes keen competition to the listed market and partly because of preparations for June 15 payments. Pre-holiday readjustments in view of the stock exchange's decision to suspend operations on Monday for the Lindbergh celebration, also undoubtedly had their effect on the price trend.

Continued liquidation of Italian issues was noticeable in the foreign division, City of Milan 6½s especially being under pressure, and decling more than a point. Softening prices characterized the foreign group as a whole. dshes keen competition to the listed whole.

A fractional advance in Baltimore & Ohio 6s to 103½, a new high record featured the domestic rail section. These bonds, which are due in 1929, are to be retired with part of the proceeds of the new B. & O. Issue of more than $60,000,000 par value of additional common stock.

ditional common stock.

Convertible issues continued to attract attention, but price movements were mixed. International Telephone 5*s advanced a little, but Erie D 4s were heavy.

Federal Government issues held fairly steady, but trading was limited.

DIVIDENDS

Mobile & Ohio declared the regular semi-annual dividend of $3.50, payable June 28 to stock of record June 17.

Warren Brothers Company declared the regular quarterly dividends of $1 per share on the common, 75 cents a share on the first preferred and $71.5 cents a share on the second preferred stock, all payable July 1 to stock of record June 20.

National Dairy Products Corporation declared an initial quarterly dividend of 75 cents on new stock, placing the issue on a $3 basis, payable July 1 to stock of record June 22. DEPRESSION IN WOOLEN TRADE PROLONGED ONE

Overcapacity of Industry Is a Factor—American Woolen Position

Because of the comparatively small number of publicly-owned companies, the prolonged depression in the woolen and worsted industry has attracted less attention than that of cotton textiles, but the passing of the 7 per cent preferred dividend for the first time since organization in 1899 by the American Woolen Company brings into clear relief the gravity of the situation brought about by 3½ years of losses.

Only a business impasse would have led directors to suspend payments to almost 20,000 shareholders.

The troubles of the industry and of American Woolen Company may be traced to several causes. They are excess capacity, sub-normal buying and on price merely to keep going, and with the broad trend of raw materials applied to selling goods-all to no

Running at Only 55 Per Cent

American Woolen hardly breaks even at less than 80 per cent capacity and not until it gets well above 90 per cent does it commence to make re-spectable profits. Contrast these figures with current operations of only around 55 per cent.

The figures themselves on American Woolen are well known but deserve repetition in the light of the suspen-sion of preferred dividends and the of-ficial statement that they have been almost wholly out of surplus since 1923.

In 1924, the loss after depreciation was $6,944,000; in 1925, the profit was only $949,000, and last year the loss was $4,235,000. In the three years from 1924 to 1926, inclusive, operating losses totaled $10,230,000.

In that same three-year period the net deficit after preferred and common dividends was $22,253,000. From the end of 1923 to the end of 1926, working capital fell from $81,364,000 to $63,946,000, a decline of $17,418.000. Surplus fell from $33,596,000 to $15,57,000 or $18,000,000. These figures tell in a nutshell the American Woolen story from 1924 to 1926.

Still Has Wealth of Assets While the preferred dividend is cumulative and "will be resumed as 124,169 soon as earnings warrant" the pre

Lest We Forget

A number of years ago certain Trust Companies operated in Boston. They offered unusual inducements to commercial and savings depositors. They were eventually closed with loss to the depositors and stockholders. The reason can be expressed in one word-Management.

Since organization of the Massachusetts Investors Trust in 1924, many other Investment Trusts have organized, for the plan is sound. But the lasting success of an Investment Trust in years to come is also expressed in one word-Management.

SERIAL 5% GOLD NOTES

Dated June 15, 1927

Due $7,500,000 annually June 15, 1929 to 1932, inclusive
Interest payable June 15 and December 15 in New York City

To be issued under Indenture dated June 15, 1927, with Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Trustee

Notes in coupon form in denomination of $1,000. Redeemable, at the option of the Company, but only as to the whole amount of any one or more maturities, on any interest date, upon sixty days' notice, at prices respectively, equivalent to such as would yield on the Notes a 41/2% annual net income return according to published bond tables to be specified in the Indenture.

E. W. Marland, Esq., President of the Company, has written us as follows regarding the business of the Company and this issue of Notes:

Marland Oil Company and its subsidiaries engage in all branches of the oil business including producing, refining, transporting and marketing. Its principal interests lie in Oklahoma, Texas and California. Since incorporation of the present company in 1920, approximately $77,000,000 has been invested in the Company's business.

The proceeds of these notes, which will constitute the Company's only funded debt, will be used to liquidate bank loans, to provide additional working capital and for other corporate purposes. After the receipt and application of the proceeds of this issue, it is estimated that net current assets as of June 30, 1927, will amount to approximately $40,000,000.

The growth of the Company's business and earnings during the past five years is indicated in the following

Years Ended December 31.	Average net daily production	Average daily pipe line runs.	Gross income available for interest, capital extinguishments and Federal income taxes.	Interest, capital extinguishments Federal income taxes and other
1922 1923 1924 1925 1926 Three Months ended	(barrels) 6,760 18,480 23,288 33,588 35,991	(barrels) 12,780 37,876 40,594 42,479 59,338	$8,092,124 7,644,090 9,258,017 24,623,730	33,967,494 5,921,090 8,903,711 9,824,661
March 31, 1927	45,017	54,883	5,049,397	15,731,347 4,820,705

Owing to the prices currently prevailing for crude petroleum and its products, the gross income available for interest, capital extinguishments and Federal income taxes in the second quarter of this year will be substantially reduced, being now estimated at $3,000,000. Should the present prices continue to the end of the present year, it is estimated that gross income available for interest, capital extinguishments and Federal income taxes for the entire quarter of this year will amount to approximately $5,000,000, but it is impossible to estimate what such charges will be for the last half of the year. The estimate of gross income for the entire year 1927 does not take into account whatever adjustments of inventory values may be necessary at the end of the year.

The Company has outstanding 2,317,059 shares of common stock of no par value, having an indicated market value, at current quotations, of over $85,000,000.

THE ABOVE NOTES ARE OFFERED FOR SUBSCRIPTION, SUBJECT TO THE CONDITIONS STATED BELOW, AT THE FOLLOWING PRICES, PLUS ACCRUED INTEREST: Notes due 1929 at 99.44% to yield 5.30%. Notes due 1931 at 98.41% to yield 5.45%. Notes due 1930 at 99.05% to yield 5.35%. Notes due 1932 at 97.85% to yield 5.50%.

Subscription books will be opened at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. at 10 o'clock A. M., Friday, June 10, 1927, and will be closed in their discretion. The right is reserved to reject any and all applications and also in any case to allot a smaller amount than applied for. Subscriptions for an equal amount of all maturities will receive prior,

All subscriptions received are to be subject to the due authorization and issue of the Notes as planned, and to approval by counsel of the form and validity of the documents and proceedings.

The amounts due on allotments will be payable at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., in New York funds to their order, and the date of payment (on or about June 28, 1927) will be stated in the notices of allotment. It is expected that the definitive Notes will be ready for delivery on the payment date.

Other Tunnels & Salt Lake Railway, on whose line the tunnel is located, and will thus shorten its route between those two cities by 170 miles.

The tunnel is 6.1 miles long and is costing $7,000,000. It is located approximately 50 miles northwest of line on the Denver & Salt Lake, or the "Moffat Road" as it is known, much of this line being of 4 per cent grade, where the road spirals over feet on the D. & S. L.

A 41-mile cut-off is being constructed to the Denver & Rio Grande's main line at Dotsero, Colorado, west of the tunnel, which will enable that line to use the D. & S. L., thus eliminating the long swing to the south through Pueblo and thence west through the Royal Gorge and over Tennessee Pass. While the scenic route of the Rio Grande may be used for passenger trains, in a freight sense, large economies are value.

World Press STUDYING ABROAD

New York Evening Post: The medieval student who wandered from university to university, regardless of political boundaries, or who went deliberately from one to another because of his desire to attend the lectures of some famous scholar is having a modern counterpart in the student who spends some time in a foreign institution without alming, as Americans who used to flock to Germany in large numbers aimed, at a doctor's degree.

Naturally enough, the tide of this educational movement has been from this country to Europe rather than in the reverse direction. An older world had more to offer than a newer. Recently, however, students have been coming from Europe here. Funds of considerable size have been established to make this experience possible. . . I,os Angeles Times: A remarkable fact regarding Canberra, the new capital city of Australia, is that no land can be purchased or sold within the city's limits, but only rented from the Government, and for a limited period, at that; and that, furthermore, this land rent is to be made to apply on the cost of the new public buildings as well as all public services the Government may render to its citizens who reside there. A writer in the New York Herald takes this news to mean that Henry George's proclamation, "The earth is the birthright of all mankind," is at last going to be put into practical operation. Perhaps, but we hadn't heard that Australia is planning to abolish all taxes save those on land, which was the main point of George's whole argument.

Mr. McAdoo as a Leader

THE speech of William G. McAdoo at Greenville, Tenn., was not the shrewd and restrained utterance of a man seeking a residential nomination at the hands of a political party in which antiprohibition sentiment is rampant. Rather was it the call to action of a leader prepared to sacrifice personal political preferment for the advancement of a cause to which he has pledged his fealty. There is danger not only within the ranks of the party to which Mr. McAdoo belongs, but among a very influential group in the Republican Party as well, that mere lip service will be given to the cause of prohibition, and that the platform utterances upon the subject will be drawn in the hope of securing the votes alike of the Anti-Saloon League and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Mr. McAdoo will have no part in such a policy of evasion and dishonesty. He says, in phrases that carry conviction:

The attack on the Eighteenth Amendment is but a part of a great movement which menaces all that is most American in our institutions. It is the fighting front of a conflict that is deeper than the liquor question. The conflict is, shall the Constitution be nullified or shall it be

No man going into a political convention, or appearing before the electorate of the whole nation as a candidate with that utterance freshly on his lips can be regarded as other than the devoted champion of a great political issue. Such oratory is not politics, but inspired advocacy. Nor is the effect of this utterance lessened by his further defiance of the liquor interests in these words:

The liquor interests naturally resisted and their resistence has grown to the point where they have suc eeded in inducing certain states to nullify the Cons tion and now are pressing forward to gain control of the Federal Government itself in order to paralyze prohibi-

There is great need for leadership of this courageous and outspoken type in the United States today. The overwhelming majority of the people of this country believe in prohibition, and demand its enforcement. But enforcement has become so entangled in a maze of politics that the minimum of results are obtained at the maximum of expense. Even at that the prohibition law has been of incalculable benefit to the industry and prosperity of the United States. This fact is being shown day by day in the thoroughly judicial survey of the economic effects of prohibition made by Professor Feldman, of the Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance at Dartmouth, being published in the columns of The Christian Science Monitor. Calm, searching, unprejudiced, even unenthusiastic, these articles set forth the truth regarding the benefits prohibition has conferred upon the American people. At its worst, to quote the phrase of Professor Fisher of Yale, it has been a tremendous boon, but it is time that acceptance of the worst should be ended. It is time that progress should be made in the honest enforcement of

As other public men than Mr. McAdoo come to the viewpoint which he so boldly presents, they will find people rallying to them as always the public rallies to the courageous leader. The very fact that the bitter dissension in the Democratic Party at its last national convention leads many to believe that Mr. McAdoo as a candidate would be heavily handicapped, and many others to believe still further that any nomination by his badly disorganized party is futile, gives to his advocacy of this issue added importance. He is in a position to speak without fear of the leaders of his party in the great cities where wet sentiment is dominant. One naragraph of his speech seems possibly to refer to himself.

The most unfortunate aspect of the absence of cour ageous political leadership is perhaps its effect on public opinion. It lowers and cheapens the tone of public disand platitudinous utterances that a frank and outspoken discussion of political realities becomes a novelty. Many people are at a loss to understand it. Accordingly, they are reluctant to regard at its face value a straightforward discussion of a public question and insist on seeing some dark and tortuous private purpose behind it. They are so unaccustomed to having real political issues frankly dis cussed that when a public man speaks out boldly and candidly and calls a spade a spade, it is at once likely to be charged that he has ulterior motives connected with his own personal advancement.

All collateral circumstances point to the gross injustice of charging to Mr. McAdoo what he refers to as "ulterior motives connected with his own personal advancement." Instead of this he has burned his bridges. He has put himself to the front as the leading advocate in his own party of an issue upon which that party is radically divided. Its most powerful leaders have been made by this utterance his most influential foes. As a result he must be looked upon as one speaking for that widespread sentiment in both parties which demands respect and obedience to the Constitution, and liberal compliance with and enforcement of the Vol-

A Summary of the Debts

TREASURY statements, whether of the United States or of foreign countries, are seldom popular reading, nor do they get very wide circulation. This is peculiarly unfortunate in so far as it applies to a report just issued by the United States Treasury, entitled "Combined Annual Reports of the World War and Foreign Debt Commission." The document, which is in fact a book of some 700 pages, is of value to statisticians and economists because of its thorough and accurate statement of the interallied war debts, and of the measures taken for their funding and collection.

Perhaps its most interesting feature is its demonstration that the United States has remitted almost $16,000,000,000 in interest and principal obligations of its foreign debtors. This amounts to almost $5,000,000,000 more than the total actual face value of the debts themselves today. The interest is computed at 5 per cent although many of the notes given when the debts were contracted bore an interest rate of 6 per cent. It is asserted, on behalf of the Treasury, that this report is not intended as an answer to any of the contentions raised by foreign governments concerning the payment of their debts. However, if not intended to be controversial in character, it nevertheless furnishes ample material for those who desire to discuss, and especially to defend, the attitude of the United States Government. For example, one section is given over to the study of the military and naval expenditures made by debtor nations, and the relative burden laid upon them by militaristic programs and by the payment of their obligation to the United States. It appears that Italy pays the United States only 3.8 per cent of what it is spending on armaments. France pays 11.2 per cent, Belgium 13.2 per cent, and Great Britain 28 per cent. The showing is interesting although it will be easy to attach too much importance to it. The unhappy state of fear which dominates so many European governments naturally leads to expenditures for defensive purposes which seem to be out of all proportion to the appropriations made for wiping off the burdensome debts.

The report will be of immense importance to those concerned in the discussion of the problem of debt revision. Foreign governments will, of course, declare that it is an ex parte statement, but it will be interesting to see whether any of the figures thus formally presented can be materially shaken as the result of foreign

Mexico and Its Railroads

TT UNQUESTIONABLY is true that railroad development in any country is a sign of economic progress, and that increased transportation facilities tend to that more intimate association between the people of the land which finds its expression in a fuller realization of respective requirements in a number of directions. Where such facilities are not present to a satisfactory extent, it will often be found that law and order are not always so easily maintained, and that chaotic conditions are permitted to exist because the authorities are unable to assert themselves as fully as ought to be the case.

Because Mexico by degrees has been introducing railroad transportation through regions the previous inaccessibility of which has worked great handicaps to both political and cultural and economic development, it is occasion for congratulation that to the already existing systems there has just been added a link which by its very nature ought to prove of great benefit to that country. The fact that the territory traversed has in times past been the scene of revolutionary activity caused interruption in construction for a period of more than twenty years. Now that the Sud Pacifico de Mexico makes it possible to have direct rail connection between San Francisco and Mexico City, connecting up the United States with the fertile west coast of the southern republic, it may be considered as assured that this particular part of Mexico will receive the full advantages of what the new railroad will bring with it.

While it is true that the road is owned by the Southern Pacific Railway, this should make no difference as to its usefulness in serving the Mexican nation. Perhaps it might never have been realized but for the vision of E. H. Harriman and Epes Randolph, who in 1904 had placed before them preliminary reports on the resources of the territory and who secured the necessary concession before the anti-Diaz revolution set in. The region is not only highly fertile, but is said to be rich in mineral deposits, including precious metals.

Historically considered, it is interesting to know that the line follows in general the ancient "King's Highway," Camina Real, which was in its day the main route from Mexico City as far as San Francisco and which was built to facilitate communication with all parts of Spanish North America. Extending the full length of the states of Sonora, Sinaloa and Nayarit, the line connects with the Mexican National Railway at Guadalajara, in the State of Jalisco. The distance from Nogales, on the international border, to Mexico City is about 1500 miles and all of the road, except the last 400 miles, is part of the Southern Pacific system. Mexico having entered upon a period of political stability which stands reflected in the greater harmony now prevailing between the scattered parts of the country, may it not be said that every mile of new railroad construction plays some part in the preservation of that peace without which no country can attain to the position where that which is best within the nation can find its most worth-while expression? The fact that the United States and Mexico so to speak, are working in co-operation in this instance should prove a sufficient warrant that the Sud Pacifico de Mexico will fulfill the mission that the very name of the railroad portends as part of its promise.

Alcohol and the French Nation

THE fight against alcohol in France has never really gathered much momentum at any time. While there are a great many organizations which have pledged themselves to combat the drink evil no appreciable headway has as yet been made by them. Wine and apéritifs are probably flourishing today in France as they never have. Since the war apparently only one serious warning has been given and that was in 1917 when fifty-five syndicates representing the large mining and metal industries appealed to the Government on the ground that the drink evil was becoming a menace to their production. A Radical Congress of course went on record last year against alcoholic abuses, saying fresh legislation was needed to abolish the growing menace of substitutes for absinthe. But the question was left

The true nature of the situation of the drink evil in France was comprehensively revealed in a recent article in the Progrès Civique (Paris) by Ferdinand Buisson, France's distinguished and noted educator, who with Jules Ferry has done as much as anyone to propagate education among the people of France and establish a strong lay school system. He asserts that powerful moneyed interests are using extensive but questionable advertising and other methods to push their alcoholic wares, and are lulling the people into a false sense of security so that they will believe there is no longer any danger to fear from cloohol in France. Then it is expected that even those who are combating the evil will cease their efforts.

M. Buisson begins the article by calling attention to the manifesto issued by l'Union des Francaises contre l'Alcool (Union of French Women Against Alcohol), at the time heavy taxation was being voted by the French Parliament. The manifesto of this organization which has been active for some time called attention to the serious problem that has been on France's hands for years: the privilege of the "bouilleurs de cru" or alcohol distillers

The argument in favor of this so-called "privilege" has strangely been that of "social peace." Moreover M. Buisson declares that it is characterized as not only a privilege but a sacred right; the right to do what one pleases with the crop of one's fruit trees. Abrogate this natural right, say the friends of alcohol, and you will cause a revolution in the country

M. Buisson does not believe, as has been declared from time to time these past years, that alcoholism is on the decrease in France, and hence brands as false the statements constantly being made to the effect that danger from this source has abated or even disappeared. In support of this he submits official figures from the Ministry of Finance, showing an increase in the consumption of alcohol from 831,100 hectoliters of 100 per cent alcohol in 1919 to 1,014,-

392 in 1925. The alcohol used for distilled beverages is of the most injurious sort, M. Buisson avers, and manufacturers employ the most audacious methods of advertising their goods, the socalled absinthe substitutes (pure absinthe was prohibited by the Government Feb. 12, 1915) being an increasing menace for the country.

Without intending to be unduly pessimistic, it should do no harm to recall finally that Professor Labbé of the Academy of Medicine declared in May, last year, that the alcoholic danger was in France now as "formidable" as in 1913, a year in which the French people consumed 1,675,000 hectoliters (44,253,000 gallons) of pure alcohol.

Electricity on New England Farms

WENTY-FIVE years ago it was generally thought that electricity might become an important factor in industrial development but there were comparatively few persons who visioned even a considerable part of the tremendous advance that has been made in the last quarter of a century.

Perhaps there is no more significant movement at the present time than that which proposes to take electricity throughout the rural areas of the northern New England states, not especially for the purpose of affording a system of lighting, but in the hope and expectation of developing a general use of electrical equipment on the farms.

To this end a survey under auspices of federal and state agents is in progress in New Hampshire, and the results thus far obtained indicate that, if electricity can be taken into the rural districts and sold at a moderate rate, electrical equipment will come into general use.

An important element in the development of this movement has been the University of New Hampshire which has been active in promoting the interests of the farmers of the State. Its demonstrations have gone far toward removing deep-seated prejudices against "new fangled things" and proving the benefits to be derived from the adoption of the results of well-tested experiments.

Especially will the farm women benefit from the use of electrical equipment. To them it will mean emancipation from all the drudgery so closely associated with early New England farm life. It will place them on a plane with the women of the urban districts and give them the opportunity to cultivate and enjoy many of the refinements to which they long have aspired.

In Maine a movement under way is designed to assure its rural areas of electrical service and with its tremendous potential hydroelectric power, said to be sufficient not only to provide the entire State with all it ever will need, but also to serve other large New England districts, Maine may yet become the golden key that will release to New England agriculturists a flow of prosperity such as they have never before

Editorial Notes

Aviation news is certainly coming into its own just now. Hence the announcement by Giuseppe M. Bellanca, designer of the airplane which Clarence Chamberlin piloted from New York to Germany, that a fleet of multimotored airplanes, operating regularly on a commercial basis between the United States and Europe, is the next move in transatlantic air travel, is certain to arouse great interest. How the descriptions of the "dreamers" of years ago tally with such specifications as these: forty passengers, 120 miles an hour, room to walk around, comfortable chairs and berths, passengers boarding the airships at the river front just as they board ship now, and so on. Doesn't it all give one a thrill? And what a note of confidence there is in this: 'As far as I am concerned, the flight was over as soon as the airship got into the air. I knew the airplane. The result was known to me the minute the airplane was on its way.'

"Birds are nesting in the broken cannon's silent mouth." Europe today is grateful for the blessings of peace. According to Sir Arthur Salter, director of the Economic and Financial Section of the League of Nations, however, while the population of Europe in 1925 as compared with 1913 has increased by 1 per cent, and its production of foodstuffs and raw material by or 5 per cent, the trade of Europe has gone down by 10 per cent. This, he says, was the "central fact" which confronted the International Economic Conference in Geneva. Trade barriers, like the barbed wire of No Man's Land, it would appear, must ultimately gol

Patriotism Above Party

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR has already told its many readers of the great gathering of women in the National Capital during the first week of May, for the purpose of deliberating with and seeking counsel of each other in the paramount matter of law enforcement, as especially related to the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act. They came together at the call of Mrs. Jessie W. Nicholson, former Democratic chairwoman of Maryland, and Miss Belle Kearney, State Senator of Mississippi.

The sentiments uttered by the sponsors of this movement, in a way that left no doubt as to the sincerity of the speakers, showed them to be possessed of a keen devo-tion to the ideal of law observance as set forth in the Constitution and the statutes. As strong as they were for allegiance to party they have made that a subordinate issue, and not a single delegate hesitated to put the public welfare above partisan considerations.

In this respect the meeting was an innovation for Democratic women, and it is fair to assume that the effect of the gathering will be far-reaching over a large section of the United States. Its almost certain result will be to open the eyes of men and women and arouse a still stronger sentiment for upholding the law in states where a vast majority of the population have already expressed themselves against the resumption of an outlawed traffic that had become a national evil. It may also be noted that the stand by this group of women will hearten the senators and congressmen of many states and fortify them in their determination to be firm in resistance to all efforts that look to repeal or modification. These experienced and patriotic women know full well the importance of backing up the lawmakers at Wash-

Mrs. Nicholson, who presided over the conference, had such poise, tact and knowledge that there were no timewasting wrangles, such as often mar the harmony of meetings. To expedite the transaction of business she and her co-organizer, Senator Kearney, had ready to present a platform, constitution and by-laws. These, with few changes, were unanimously adopted. They were models of and simplicity. The platform could surely be approved by persons of any party or creed, as may be seen from this paragraph:

The supremacy of the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof are the best and wisest guarantees of the rights, liberty and happiness of all the people; and all movements seeking by deception, political manipulation, threats or organized popular clamor to overthrow or supplant these guarantees are attempts to destroy the American system of representative government organized and established by the Constitution

The preamble of the constitution shows the intention of the league:

From a Car Window

LL day long the rushing train has hurried us through A fields where I am longing to walk quietly in the cool grass, over rivers whose banks hang heavy with flowering shrubs that must surely be the homes of many birds. Past meadows sprinkled with gold we hurry. Surely that gold must be held in the chalice of buttercups, but so rapidly are we moving that it is impossible to identify a

I look far ahead and select one clump of the rich vellow color. I will keep looking at that one clump until we pass it and certainly I should be able to separate it into its component parts. But no, it has disappeared, just a whirling mass of gilded earth.

Here, right near the car window, is a bank covered with a blanket of gorgeous blue, so "deeply, beautifully blue" that it seems to be a segment of the sky laid out on the carpet of mother earth for our enjoyment. If I could only know what those lovely flowers are! If they were taller they might be lupin, if they were not so tall they would be myosotis-there they are, and I am longing to know them, to see them nearer, to find out whether they are old friends or new acquaintances, and to tell them how beautiful they are-but on we rush.

I shall look further afield, the objects do not move away from me so swiftly over there, the trees are more stately and not so blurred to my vision, the village nestling among the foothills stays in view until I have been able to distinguish the church and some of the homes, but now it. too, has gone. Is there nothing which is not moving? I am weary of the roar, the rush, the ever-shifting scene.

My thought turns inevitably to the marvelous achievements that are represented in this rushing train and the country through which we are traveling. Did those who were pioneers in this section ever realize the wonders of today; for which they were opening the way? Can they have glimpsed the conquest of air and land and water they typify? And are we thankful enough for their selfsacrifice and their devotion to what they saw as their duty to those who were coming after them? As my attention is turned in this direction, I forget for a few moments the hurry and bustle of the journeying train.

Suddenly the low-hanging clouds part and the sun breaks through. It remains motionless in its glory while the clouds play about it in changing effects of rose and amethyst, gold and purple. The skies have opened and we are gazing upon almost incredible glories. People from the other side of the car come across to look and exclaim, some to opine that it will be a fine day tomorrow, others to drink in the wonder of it all in speechless emotion. For a rapturous hour we watch the shifting splendor, then calmly, slowly, it fades into a gray-purple afterglow and sinks into night.

As I turn my attention to the scenes about me I realize of the league:

Realizing the menace of law violation to our Government and to life and property, we, women Democrats of America, trusting in God, band ourselves together. Our purpose is to unite the efforts of women Democrats throughout that we are rushing on just as before, but I am rested, tranquil, satisfied. All my eager fretfulness has gone. I have learned that "A man's reach is beyond his grasp," and have reached for those things which take me away from the things that I would grasp. As the days fly onward I shall remember this sunset and fix my gaze on these things which are eternal in the heavens.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Berlin

OWERING above all other events of the week has been the arrival and reception of the American airmen, Chamberlin and Levine, after negotiating the 3800-odd miles separating the United States and Germany. Not only has the flight established a nonstop record, but it has also done more to foster good feeling than any other single event in recent times. It has also given an impetus to aviation, and signs are already apparent that the much-needed funds for the development of a regular transatlantic service by air will be forthcoming. Levine himself is understood to be willing to put $2,000,000 into the project, and other promoters may follow suit.

The twenty-four-hour day has now been officially introduced in Germany on the railways, in the post, and in the army and navy, as well as on the transportation systems of this city. Thus, after all, the clock will "strike thirteen." Hitherto, if the Germans wanted to indicate that something unexpected was happening they would say: But now it strikes thirteen," for obviously the striking of that hour would be a most extraordinary incident. But now the improbable has become a common everyday happening. It is, however, doubtful whether clocks actually striking all twenty-four hours will be introduced. One newspaper suggests-in fun-that the week should be divided up into hours, which would make it possible to dispense with the weekdays. Jokes of this kind are quite the fashion now, for the population on the whole refuses to take the twenty-four-hour clock seriously.

Thus the, probably invented, story is told of a man who asks a station porter when the next train for Dresden leaves. "Nineteen twenty-eight," is the reply. "What," exclaimed the horrified passenger, "are no more trains to Dresden leaving this year?" In another similar tale a girl asks for a ticket to Leipzig. The official hands it to her with the remark that the train leaves at fourteen. "But does it leave in the afternoon?" the girl asks anxiously The officials, however, are taking the new clock quite seriously and several newspapers are supporting them.

The eight special express trains in Germany connecting Berlin with Holland and England, Switzerland, Hamburg, Munich and Cologne, for which an extra fee is charged, are to receive names of their own in order to distinguish them from the rest of the trains. In suggesting this, the German railway company points to the "Flying Scotsman" and the "Cornish Riviera Express in England," the "Train Bleue" in France and to the custom of especially designating trains in the United States. This resolution on the part of the authorities is most remarkable considering the sobernes of German officialdom, opposed as it is to any flight of tancy or picturesque wording. But the railway administration intends to go even a step further by painting these trains in special colors. Another interesting innovation planned is the introduction of Pullman cars on German railways, but thus far the management has not yet decided upon the type to be used. This year, too, so-called kitchen cars have been introduced which serve meals to the passengers in the coaches, thus taking the place of restaurant cars where these are not available

That a big ammunition and war material factory need not suffer, but on the contrary may well prosper if it turns from the manufacturing of "swords and spears" to that of from the manufacturing of "swords and spears" to that of "pruninghooks and ploughshares" is well proved by the present standing of the Krupp works in Essen as becomes evident from a report recently published by its management. According to this statement the bank deposits and other liquid funds have increased in the five months ending February 28 by 10,000,000 marks and the value of stocks by 7,000,000 marks. The amount of bank debts have decreased and there are prestically no more short-tarmed decreased and there are practically no more short-termed liabilities. The number of men employed has risen to 63,000 including clerks. The number of orders booked is satisfactory. The Krupp works now manufacture motorcars, engines, cash registers, farming machines, typewriters and other similar harmless and useful articles.

It is fifty years ago, in May, 1877, that a law for the protection of inventions, the patent law, was introduced in Germany. In the meantime not less than 1,400,000 patents have been applied for partly by non-Germans at the patent office here of which, however, only 440,000 were granted. This indicates the exacting manner in which patent applications are examined here. The first patent was issued under the new law on July 2, 1877 and dealt with the production of a red ultramarine dye. It had the rare brevity of forty-six words. One of the last issued deals with details of a Zeppelin airship. The immense patent office building in this city contains not less than about 250,000 books. Of these, 70,000 volumes contain 6,000,000 patent letters from Germany, England, France, the United States, Switzerland, Austria, Denmark and Norway.

There are 80,000 volumes of periodicals and 70,000 books of technical description. Patents are now issued for a period of eighteen years. It was Werner Siemens, the famous pioneer in the field of electrotechnics and founder of the great firms bearing his name, who was mainly responsible for the introduction of the new patent law fifty years ago because he regarded the lack of protection of inventions as one of "the greatest obstacles in the pathway of a free and independent development of German-industry." Before this law came into force each state issued patents individually which were valid for a maximum of three years. Many German inventors, therefore, emigrated and foreign companies often refused to sell their products in Germany because they lacked protection.

Singers, and especially those who appreciate the songs of Hugo Wolf, will be pleased to learn that a German publisher to bring out a collection of by the famous composer. They were taken from manuscripts in the possession of a private museum in Cologne The publication, it is announced, will take place shortly. Considering the beautiful music of Wolf's compositions it is a matter of wonderment that these songs have remained so long in oblivion.

Lindbergh and Clean News To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The quotation on the front page of the Monitor for June 3, from the Lewistown (Montana) Democrat-News, entitled "Clean News," must have struck a chord which the past few weeks. Captain Lindbergh did more than "advance aviation" when he took his record-breaking hop alone over the Atlantic. Among other things he sent a wave of happiness and cheer throughout the news, that came as a refreshing draught of clear, pure air into the public consciousness, stale and stuffy with many depressing reports of late months. And the best of it all is that everyone just naturally loves to read about him.

It makes one wonder why the newspaper men do not obey their preference to "chuck into the waste-paper basket" the sordid news which is only after all an acquired taste. What sensational case even at its point of highest, worked-up interest has swept the news-stands clean of their editions as did the feat of Lindbergh? Sorry, indeed, was that individual who did not secure his paper early that Sunday morning when the welcome news of the aviator's safe arrival in Paris appeared in the news-papers. By noon papers were almost not to be had. The impulsive interest in a fine, brave deed was spontaneous and universal.

The news of Lindbergh's actual exploit, however, would have been the news of the day, important as it was, but it is his character that people still love to read about, his gracious tact, his "compelling smile," his steady modesty, his unassuming simplicity. Exploits like his are rare, but character like his is surely not quite so rare. It must be found for the searching. If he is a "typical young American," he must be one of many with the same sterling qualities, not yet thrust into prominence by the revealing quali-ties, not yet thrust into prominence by the revealing light of publicity. But these unsung heroes and their accomplish-ments would make just as good reading, "interesting, in-spiring, helpful, prideful news" that no newspaper man would "prefer to chuck into the waste-basket."

Why send reporters dealy to the vestions are the send reporters dealy to the vestions are the send reporters.

Why send reporters daily to the police courts in search of the unusually bad, for news that depresses everybody; why not send them into the walks of industry and business and art and invention for the unusually good for news, for the high characters instead of the low ones? The fact has again been proved by this case of Lindbergh that those who insist that the public finds great interest in good healthy "clean news" have been quite right.
